Rain no damper on CreekFest

More than 60 people gathered for a discovery walk along Lindsay Creek at CreekFest which featured interpretive panels, an electric fishing demonstration and experts sharing their passion about birds and rocks in the area. Photo: Edith Leigh Upoko David Ellison and the Sacred Heart School kapa haka group get ready to open the festival.

"IT'S RAINING but what the heck," Upoko David Ellison told festivalgoers as he officially opened CreekFest 2017.

It was a statement that certainly seemed to sum up the attitude of the valley community. A rainy day didn't deter more than 60 people enjoying a discovery walk along Lindsay Creek, while an estimated 400 people came along to the festival at Chingford Park.

CreekFest organising committee member Wendy Tripp was delighted at the community spirit of the day. "We thought the volunteers and marshals might be the only ones who would turn up."

The event is all about celebrating the creek and even though we had to postpone the live music it was amazing to see so many people come to share our passion for our awa.

COMMENTS FROM walkers on the discovery walk ranged from "I've lived in the valley for ages and I didn't know this was here" to "Wow, I didn't realise our creek could sustain so much wildlife."

Fish and Game Dunedin field officer Steve Dixon stunned an eel aged about 30 years old with his electric fishing machine. "It's rare to catch a short-fin eel, usually I get long -fins," he says.

Scientist and Valley Voice Nev-ology columnist Helen Jack shared her passion for rocks, showing people the qualities of rocks in the area, such as some that are magnetised. "I was surprised that people actually got as excited about rocks as I am."

From the editor:

AS I packed up my camera gear ready for CreekFest I wondered if I was wasting my time. It was a wet, miserable day and I thought chances were high few people would come.

I could not have been more pleasantly surprised. It was an amazing day and, to me, it demonstrated real community passion for Lindsay Creek. I look forward to seeing what will grow from this festival. Its always nice to get recognition from one's peers, and to see a story from our community newsletter picked up first by national then international media, is always satifying. Dunedin North Intermediate's new uniform choices have put them on the international stage. It is great to see our local leaders making waves around the country and the world as they all strive to give our children the best education.—Edith Leigh, Valley Voice editor

Workshops give practical ideas for cosy homes

With autumn well underway and winter fast approaching the Valley Project has two Cosy Homes workshops coming up in May. Moisture and dampness solutions, mould removal, DIY heat retention and curtain bank information will be the focus of the first workshop on Saturday 13 May, 2–4pm, at the Valley Project community rooms, 262 North Rd.

A follow-up practical workshop will demonstrate how to put window film onto different window frames as a form of DIY cheap double-glazing, and how to make a cheap pelmet which sits above curtains to help prevent heat loss. The second workshop will be on the following Sunday 21 May, 2–4pm, at the Valley Community Workspace, 11 Allen St.

Many different birds to spot in valley

THE VALLEY is a great place for bird watching with more than 30 different species using the Dunedin Botanic Garden, ruru (morepork) in the old quarry and Chingford Park and a secretive fernbird right on top of Mt Cargill.

Otago Birds New Zealand representative Mary Thompson has been checking out the valley birds in preparation for an upcoming short course, Introduction to

Bird Studies, to be held at the community rooms.

The sessions will cover bird identification, breeding behavior, nesting, feathers and moult, migration and methods for surveying birds for conservation purposes. There will also be option to join guided bird-watching field trips, says Mary.

"We know many people in Dunedin are keen watchers of birds in their own gardens and appreciate living in a city where many native birds are commonly seen."

Observations all people can make often provide valuable information. Recently the oldest documented living tūī was spotted in Dunedin, while noting the first sightings in spring of shining cuckoos from Pacific Islands and godwits from Alaska may help identify effects of climate change.

The course is free, but enrolment is essential as places are limited. To enroll contact Mary on 464 0787 or email maryt@actrix.co.nz

The 7-week course will be at the Valley Project community rooms, on Tuesdays, 7–8.30pm, starting on 11 April.

Community apple-pressing day

AUTUMN IS the season of abundance and the Community Food Harvesting Dunedin group are helping the community to make the most of it.

At a community baking and preserving workshop we will make jams, chutney, jellies and sauces to preserve an abundance of apples, pears and quinces. There will be preserves for you to take home and for Dunedin Food Banks. A $2 to $3 koha would be appreciated.

Bring your surplus apples (or any other fruit that juices well) and get them pressed into some delicious, fresh apple juice on our Apple Press Day. The Waitati Open Orchard apple press is coming for the day and we appreciate any further koha towards usage and maintenance of it.

We also want to say "thank you" to all the harvesting volunteers. Please come along and test all preserves made during the 2016/17 harvesting season.

For more information contact Annika on 021 343 260 or ackorsten@gmail.com.—Annika Korsten

North East Valley's and Pine Hills 'Community Orchard' is the topic for April's HortTalk at the Botanic Gardens.

Philippa Jamieson from Transition Valley 473 will give a brief history of the project to plant and care for fruit and nut trees on public land in our area. The vision was for the community to have a free source of healthy food and to come together to care for the trees, learn new skills and meet neighbours.

It is both challenging and rewarding growing trees in a community setting. Come and hear more!

Volunteer role all about people

UP TO 340 volunteers working around Otago help the Otago Community Hospice provide care and support for people who are dying and their families.

In their purpose-built home on North Rd the hospice is always looking for volunteers to help in the kitchen, gardens, reception and providing companionship to patients.

The Valley Voice stopped by for a chat with volunteer Rhonda Callender.

How did you get involved with the hospice?

I have had a lot of personal experience with family members dying of cancer and the hospice does such an amazing job looking after patients and families.

What is your role at the hospice?

I help out in the kitchen every fortnight. We set up meal trays, deliver meals to patients, do dishes, help out with food preparation and anything else that might be needed. One of the great things about volunteering here is you can do as few or as many shifts as you would like.

What do you enjoy about volunteering at the hospice?

I love the people I work with. You are always meeting different people – the staff, other volunteers, patients and families. The meals they serve here are beautiful and I love seeing the joy on patients' faces when we deliver them and the comments we get back from people.

Otago Community Hospice volunteer Rhonda Callender ready to deliver morning tea to a patient.

What do you wish other people knew about the hospice?

That it's not a scary place. Lots of people say 'Oh isn't it awful, how can you be amongst people who are dying?', but the moment people walk in here it has got a lovely peaceful feel.

What do you like to do when you are not volunteering?

I'm looking after grandkids and I love reading and following sport.

Are you a valley local?

In some ways. I live in Mosgiel, but I grew up on Baldwin St so I know the valley pretty well.

What would you say to someone thinking about getting involved?

Don't just think about it, give it a go. If it's not for you that's fine, but I'm sure most people would enjoy it.

The next volunteer information session at the Otago Community Hospice is on 4 April and 2 May, 5.30–7pm. Contact 473 6005 for more information.

English village fete to adorn Chingford Park

A TRADITIONAL 'English village fête' will be on at Chingord Park this Sunday to help raise awareness of Alzheimers disease and how it affects communities. The family fun day is being organised by the Alzheimers Society Otago.

There will be a village pub, Ye Olde Stone Stable Inn, Devonshire teas, a dedicated Kidzone with Punch 'n' Judy, storytelling, children's games and races such as egg and spoon race, a Victorian sponge baking competition, croquet, archery, cricket

(complete with a pavilion where lemonade Gazebos and the odd marguee will be and cucumber sandwiches can be purchased with deckchairs to sit in), live entertainment, including Morris dancers, and a maypole as well as musical acts and lots more.

There will be a small selection of market stalls selling produce and items we associate with traditional home-making talents such as baking, preserves, jams, sauces, plants, traditional handmade children's toys and handmade craft items.

'dressed' with metres and metres of bunting made for us and put up by volunteers. Dunedin and Mosgiel communities have rallied round to make this happen. We are so grateful to them all and look forward to a great day.

The fête is on from 11am-3.30pm at Chingford Park, Sunday 2 April (postponement date 9 April). —Pam Warren, fête organiser Kia ora, my name is Hayley Rata Heyes. I grew up in Karitane and recently returned to Dunedin after five years away. I am an artist and writer interested in representations of Central Otago, a region my family has a strong connection to. For my Art Tardis project, in collaboration with my husband Alexander, I have made a replica of harakeke sandals found near Patearoa. The sandals were probably made between 1550 and 1800 indicating an early Māori presence in the region.

Anyone interested can contact Hayley via email ratahayley@gmail.com. The Art Tardis is currently located outside The Grid café.

The Bevin Family are stalwarts of the Opoho Church and with their friends play a range of music. The group comprises piano, cello, flute, violins and guitars. Philip will sing some of his own compositions, too.

The Art Show's feature artist this year is Fiona Stirling with works from her Rangi and Papa series which differ from her usual land/ seascapes and night sky paintings. Fiona has been involved with the Opoho Art Show since its inception.

In a change from previous years, the Art Show is opening the weekend before the Opoho Church Fair. The fair will have the usual array of books, pre-loved clothes, food, coffee, white elephant and more.—Gabrielle Panckhurst

SIAU-JIUN Lim, originally from Malaysia, has been living in New Zealand for eleven years. She currently works as a graphic designer at Otago Polytechnic and studies part-time at the Dunedin School of Art.

Siau-Jiun and her husband moved from Christchurch to Dunedin after the earthquake in 2011. Her display, (be)longing, is about her acknowledgement and longing to be reconnected to nature.

Siau-Jiun grew up in a secluded area with limited resources. As a child the overgrown bush was her playground, companion and restful place. As time went by, she witnessed the destruction of the environment. The long-lost bush has influenced her views and living choices.

In New Zealand she is inspired by the way peo-

To reflect nature in her painting she produces work with things found from nature such as bird feathers, leaves, sticks and recycled materials, alongside traditional brushes.

Football holiday clinics

THE NORTHERN Junior A Football Club will be running a school holiday football coaching clinic during the autumn school holidays. The clinic will provide opportunities for young players to develop and extend their football skills and tactical understanding of the game.

The junior club will be working with the Northern senior club and Football South to provide club-based skills development through school holiday programmes. This will provide leadership opportunities for youth players to plan and coach young players within the club on local grounds and provide fundraising opportunities to purchase equipment and strips.

Northern Galaxy 15th Grade will be leading the football coaching, supported by players from the Northern Senior 1st Grade team who will mentor them through the planning and practice required. Kidz Inc will provide

Toy library goes online after a busy summer

THE DUNEDIN City Toy Library committee has been busy over the summer months and we have lots of exciting news to share.

Rachael McCann has taken over as our new librarian replacing Ali Rashidinejad who left us after six years in the role. Rachael has overseen a complete stocktake and clean of all our toys and the place is looking great!

While we took stock of all our toys we also uploaded them onto an online database. The database allows us to send members a list of what toys we have and a reminder message for when their toys are due. It will also give us information on what our most popular toys are so we can buy more of these. We've got hundreds of toys and you can see them all here at http://dctl.mibase.com.au We're also making a strategic plan to refresh our toy stock with quality, fun, hard-wearing toys. If you'd like some input email us at dunedincitytoylibrary@gmail.com or find us on Facebook and drop us a line.

The Toy Library is open from 10–11am every Wednesday and Saturday at 9 Northumberland St. Annual memberships start from $25 and our Grandparent Memberships are a real bargain.—Jennifer Lawn, Dunedin Toy Library treasurer

Rachel McCann (left) is taking on the librarian role at the Dunedin City Toy Library as Ali Rashidinejad finishes after six years in the role.

Popcorn

AGE: 2-3 year old female BREED: black & white cat PERSONALITY: kind, friendly & playful LOVES: treats & pats

Popcorn is the sweetest wee black and white cat. She came to us last September after she was abandoned and was heavily pregnant. Popcorn had her litter of kittens here at the centre and went out on foster.

Fortunately the kittens have all found their forever homes but sadly Popcorn is still at the centre waiting for a home of her own.

Her kind, friendly and playful nature make her a staff favourite so why not pop down to SPCA Otago to meet her and giver her the forever homes she deserves.

Bistro owners take on Normanby Tavern

THE NORMANBY Tavern has been getting a make-over as new owners Richard and Susanne Dagg refurbish the bar and introduce new entertainment.

The couple have been running the Normanby Bistro for almost three years so taking on the tavern seemed a logical step when former owner, Greg North, retired.

"So many local or community hotels have closed in the past ten years and I don't want to see this one fall over," says Richard. "People in the valley deserve to have somewhere decent, tidy, clean and friendly."

The pair both look tired but excited after orchestrating a stream of painters and carpet layers and cleaning and shopping for new furniture. They have brightened up the bar by painting the walls cream, put in new carpet and plan to set up a cosy lounge bar as well.

They are introducing monthly karaoke, ladies' nights, theme nights and live music. Wayne and the Good Tones will be playing on Saturday 15 April and there will be a pyjama party on Friday 21 April.

Now that he is working behind the bar Richard has even given up his famous t-shirts to dress smartly in a shirt although he still likes to choose a shirt that creates a bit of a talking point!

Suzanne and Richard McCallum are enjoying their new role behind the bar at the Normanby Tavern while continuing to run the bistro as well.

Suzanne says they take their host responsibilities seriously and there is always plenty of bar food available. They even have a courtesy vehicle available after the bistro closes.

"We love it here," says Suzanne. "We like to call it 'your local' and encourage people to come along and enjoy some good food and atmosphere."

Valley fault considered inactive

AT 7.49PM on Tuesday 9 April 1974 the valley was jolted out of its evening telly watching by a rude shake. Jolting wasn't an entirely foreign feeling for many who lived close to the guarry and its weekly blasts. However, rather than a twitch on the earth's skin, this much stronger tremor came from its bowels.

Seven kilometres out to sea from St Kilda, and around 20km down in the crust, a small fault deep underground had rearranged itself in an effort to get a bit more comfy, and in the process let off a magnitude 4.9 earthquake -Dunedin's only damaging earthquake of the last 170 years.

In the valley houses rocked, power poles swayed and a few things fell off shelves. A few cracks appeared in older houses and bricks clattered from some chimneys. We got off pretty lightly compared to other areas of town, thanks partly to our distance from the epicentre, but also thanks to our geology.

The hard volcanic rock of the valley transmits earthquake waves cleanly so shaking is jolty but guick. In contrast, earthquake waves bounce around in the soggy sediments of places like South Dunedin. Although South Dunedin was closest to the epicentre it also experienced more intense and damaging shaking because of its wetland origins.

So when is another one coming? I like to say that my crystal ball broke in the Christchurch earthquake. But seriously, while damaging earthquakes in this neck of the woods are pretty rare, rare events have to happen sometime.

Where could an earthquake come from? I've been asked about "the fault that runs up the valley" a few times. There is a fault on the geological map of Dunedin that runs up from Logan Park, over Signal Hill and into the head of North East Valley. However, as far as we know this fault is inactive, meaning that it has done its dash and has long since retired. Dunedin's known active faults include the Akatore and Titri faults to the southwest of the city. Recent research has shown that while these faults are relative slumberers, compared to their more lively cousins further north, they still wake up and party with a magnitude 7ish earthquake every few thousand years. Which means, while they are statistically unlikely to unleash during our lifetimes, there's no excuse for being surprised if they, or another unknown fault, do.

And it's not just close earthquakes. I was reminded at a recent Alpine Fault workshop that while a big central South Island earthquake will not rattle us too badly here, it may still leave us with limited power, communications and food and fuel supplies for days or weeks.

So, while we are not earthquake central, we should still be mindful of them. And you know what that means! That's right, lower by several notches your expectation of how much anyone else, apart from your immediate community, will be able to tell you or help you if a big earthquake happens.

Earthquakes can be scary, but they are part and parcel of living in New Zealand and are to be lived around, rather than stopping us in our tracks.—Helen Jack

Cartooning workshops

CARTOONIST BRENT Harpur is proud of the fact he can entertain kids with "just a sharpie and a blank piece of paper".

"Children don't need too much encouragement to draw and they have that real enthusiasm and lack of fear to try it."

Brent says he has always been
